SOLDIERS KILLING RATS
AS WELL AS EACH OTHER:
RAT TAILS WORTH A CENT

Paris, Feb. 25.—Rat tails are now worth a cent each on the Paris market. The French battle front. The General commanding in that section has issued the following order of the day: "With the destruction of the rats, a premium of five centimes shall be paid for each rat destroyed. The premium shall be paid every ten days, on presentation of the tails of the destroyed animals. The rats, bearing very suspicious marks of spreading disease must not be handled, but immediately buried, and the tails done up in a paper impregnated with tar or petroleum. The order resulted in a tremendous slaughter of rats, but was not obeyed in all its details. It appears that the new fashion of trimming women's garments with fur has created an outlet for rats' fur, and the rat hunting soldiers skin their victims before burying them, and sterilize the hides and sell them to the suiters behind the front.

It is estimated that the rats have destroyed millions of francs worth of provisions sent to the soldiers by their friends and relatives at home. An officer at the front recently wrote his wife that it would be useless for her to send him any more provisions, as it was impossible to preserve them from the rats, and in no case had he any more than a single lunch out of all the eatables sent to him. Some surprise has been expressed at the several hundred thousand men turned rat hunters have been unable to exterminate them. A mathematician has taken the trouble to calculate that a year's progeny of a single pair of rats may easily amount to more than one hundred and twenty-two millions, which he holds is proof that only wholesale poisoning or suffocation can cope with the pest. In fact, of all the different measures adopted against them, none have produced the results obtained by the suffocating gas that the French occasionally send toward the German trenches. Thousands of them were picked up dead in the rat line of the trenches after one of these gas attacks.

Another statistician has figured out that it costs a centime and a half a day to nourish a rat, and consequently figures their depredation on the basis to amount to forty-four million dollars a year in France alone.

PLAN TO IMPROVE HOUSING CONDITIONS

National Americanization Committee Proposes Competition for Aid of Foreign Born Residents.

In an effort to improve the living conditions of foreign born residents of the United States who have come to this country as immigrants, to promote the welfare and Americanism of American communities, the National Americanization committee of New York City has announced a housing competition which is the first piece of work launched under the Roosevelt America First fund.

In a bulletin sent out by the committee it states that "Janesville, according to the United States census of 1910, had 1,997 immigrants. Only 82 per cent of these were at that time naturalized citizens, which means that Janesville in common with other industrial communities is facing the problem of Americanization, if the English language, American citizenship and American standards of living are to prevail throughout the city."

New communities, clustering around new industries are being produced with remarkable rapidity in this country," the bulletin continues. "It is the small, isolated, housing present, not the large city, in which the 'congestion problem' of the country is centered. Men flock by thousands to places where there are plenty of jobs—out on dwellings in one New England town families are being 'evicted' not because they cannot pay rent, but because they cannot get houses for the rent they can pay. A large percentage of these workmen are immigrants who have no way of creating American standards of living for themselves. If such standards are not provided for them, and instead European standards of living and customs, vitally affecting social health and prosperity, are maintained, the results from these conditions cannot be an American community."

"Prizes amounting to $2,100 are offered. These are divided into two groups. The first group, housing plans for a single family house, for a combined family and lodging house, and for a boarding house or community dwelling. The first prize for this class is $1,000, the second $500, the third, fourth and fifth $100 each.

"In the statement of the conditions of the contest, which is being issued to competitors, it is pointed out that these two important considerations are the welfare of the tenant and the cost. The wages of the employees for whom the houses are designed are to be from $2 a day to $30 a week, and the cost of the house is to be $200 and a second of $100 is offered for a satisfactory substitute for the detailed freight cars now used to house construction gangs on railways."

CHAMBERLAIN FAILS TO SECURE DAMAGES

Jury Erings in Verdict in Favor of Defendant in Suit Involving Edgerton Parties.

After a short deliberation the jury of six men trying the civil action of E. W. Chamberlain vs. Mr. Shackleton, both of Edgerton, returned a verdict in favor of the defendant, refusing the damages to Chamberlain. It was alleged in the complaint that judgment for the extent of $15 was due to Chamberlain from Shackleton for labor and services, while Chamberlain was in partnership with the defendant in Edgerton. Claims were advanced for sums due to Shackleton for labor and for boarding a man named Thomas. All these demands were merged into one in the suit.

The defense, upheld by Attorney Louis Avery, argued that the business undertaken by Chamberlain and Shackleton in which Shackleton furnished the funds, was losing money, and that the money given to Chamberlain was all that was reasonable consideration for the business loss. The defense attorney, Hal Martin, countered this claim with the view that when the business was beginning to prove a success, Shackleton "chickened out," Chamberlain, knowing that he would have to divide the profits was originally agreed. Testimony was taken to the effect that the minds of both parties did meet in their contracts over the amount to be given to Chamberlain.

The trial started late yesterday afternoon and continued until noon today. The jury heard testimony for about eleven o'clock. The jury was composed of the following men: E. C. Whitehead, S. E. Bissell, George Gardner, Frank Blair, August Baumann and Edgar Norberg.

Another Edgerton case was before the municipal court this morning when Attorney Hal Martin filed papers, testimony taken and judgment of hundreds of dollars was awarded Robert J. Bruhn, guardian ad litem of Betty Bruhn. In an action in the circuit court Betty Bruhn, through her guardian, brought suit against Dr. F. C. Miers for damages for improper conduct. The jury was testified by Jesse Earl, clerk of court, rendered verdict for the defendant and awarded him judgment to the extent of $38.29, the cost of the case. Through some legal angle execution has never been made the suit was brought for honor and other costs, which will total close to one hundred dollars.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Gazette.

Some time ago I wrote an article to the Gazette asking that something be done to stop this roller skating on sidewalks. The Washington school yard has been given to the children for a play ground. There are many yards of cement walk around the school. Can't the children skate here? There are delicate people who are simply tortured by the clatter of skates. Another thing I would like to ask, who would pay damages if a child was injured? One must either get off the walk or take chance of being knocked down. I think it is not an unusual thing to see a dozen or more children all skating together on the North Washington street. Won't someone else express the "Voice of the People" express their opinion. I know many have very decided ones.

A Proposed New York Law

Says in part:

"No food or drink, save coffee, tea and cocoa, containing any habit forming drug except alcohol, shall be sold within the State."

—From N w York Journal of Commerce, Jan. 17, 1916.

This bill, recently introduced in the New York Legislature, amply attests the well-known fact that coffee, tea and cocoa contain the habit-forming drug, caffeine.

But why discriminate in favor of caffeine when it has been proven beyond a question of doubt that this subtle, habit-forming drug, sooner or later spells ill health, and frequently disaster for many coffee drinkers.

Caffeine is a powerful irritant. It disturbs the regular functioning of the vital organs, often causing headaches, biliousness, heart flutter, nervousness, insomnia, or some other symptom of caffeine poisoning.

The easy, sure way out of coffee troubles is to quit the coffee and use

INDIANS HAVE GOOD STRING OF PLAYERS

Much Purchased Cleveland Indians Start Training for Real Baseball Despite Financial Transactions.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Cleveland, O., Feb. 25.—With the departure of some from here within the next 48 hours and the arrival at New Orleans of others already on their way, the Cleveland Indians will be ready Feb. 29 to sail into a month's spring practice for the 1916 season. Heaven knows they need it. The in and out fielders will start work the 29th. For the last week eleven pitchers and four catchers have been lumbering up at New Orleans under the direction of Manager Lee Fohl, who will start his second season as manager this year, and Ray Chapman, shortstop. Several things stand out prominently this year which augur well for the team. For the first time in years there is harmony within the club, players with quarrelsome attitudes having been eliminated. The team stands solidly intact. Fohl, the club is practically intact, and much new material taken on last year is somewhat seasoned, making possible, with the expected addition of three new players, a team that will play with pep and doggedness. The men are determined to finish better than they did last year, when they landed in seventh place. The team needs one more good pitcher, a second string catcher, a second baseman and a third sacker. The addition of men to strengthen these spots would bolster the Indians into a first division team. It would be no surprise to fans if Chick Gandil, Washington's first baseman, were added to the team, allowing Jay Kille to go to the outfield.

Harry Turner, crack utility infielder, probably will hold down second as usual, but he is so susceptible to injury that a good sub would have to be developed or purchased. Bill Wambgan, a youngster, looked good at the second sack last season and he may be used as relief for Turner. Walter Barbere is expected to start at third, as he worked well there last season. Joe Evans is fast around the third corner but inexperience may prevent his holding the job there except in emergencies.

Jack Grimes, sun fielder and pinch hitter, will do garden work as usual, barring a recurrence of bad legs. Elmer Smith and Bobby Roth are other fielders who may land regular berths. The outfield is not particularly strong. Al Colamore and Willie Mitchell, southpaw, are the chief standbys on the hurling force, with Steve O'Neill, veteran receiver. Aside from three nats Reds, the Indians will play no teams before the season opens. The barnstorming trip northward has been abandoned. The club consists of thirty men at present. There may not be so many a few weeks from now.

GRADE SCHOOL LEAGUE TEAMS PLAY TOMORROW—JUNIORS PLAY MILTON JCT.

In the graded school basketball league which is now in progress at the Young Men's Christian Association, the games scheduled for tomorrow morning will be between the Indians and Washington, and the Lincoln vs. St. Mary's. The first game scheduled is between the two teams belonging to the first league. The St. Mary's and Lincoln teams belong to the second league.

H. J. Center, boys' secretary, who is at the head of the league, states that he wishes all the schools would return the proceeds from the season tickets. As soon as all money is returned trophies will be purchased for the winners of the league.

Tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock the Milton Junction Juniors will play the local Y. M. C. A. Juniors in a basketball contest. Other games are being scheduled by Physical Director C. E. Leak for the different teams of the association.

NEW FORWARD WILL PLAY WITH BROWNS

Anderson, West Brown's Star Goal Shooter, to be in Game on Saturday.

When the West Side Browns play the Lakota Cardinals at the Auditorium on Saturday night, the Chicago association five will have Anderson, a star forward, who did not play in their first game here, and whom the Browns expect to show some fancy goal shooting. This player is rated as the second best basket shot in Chicago, being only outclassed by a forward on the Chicago championship team, the I. A. C.

In games on the West Side Browns' schedule, Anderson has scored over half his team's points and to his absence, the Browns attribute their first defeat here. Chicago five and center Dalton, who will play against the Browns that they outclass them. Dalton will probably play against Anderson and if the Chicago forward is able to score his usual number of points, he will do something that no other western forward has been able to do. The line-up for the Lakotas will be, Hemming, center; Gray and Dalton, guards; Edler and Atwood, forwards.

Next Thursday the Lakotas will play Stoughton at Stoughton in the first out-of-town game in a month. The week following they may play at Plattville as many Wisconsin teams are issuing challenges to be played on the challenger's court.

There are three teams that the Lakotas desire to beat before they close their most successful season. Rockford Co. E. is the most feared team and a game between Fogarty, Young et al. would be the biggest drawing card that could be staged here. Then there is the Tomah Cardinal five and the Chicago I. A. C. club, who to date have been undefeated. The Janesville fans would also like to see the Red Wing Minnesota team down here for a series of games, as the Minnesota giants have never played here. The Illinois Athletic club will contest in the Amateur Basketball championship tourney to be played in Chicago, March 16th and 17th, and are picked to win the tourney for the title. If they do, further attempts will be made to secure that team to play here.

HIGHS GO AGAINST FAST TEAM TONIGHT

J. H. S. Basketball Five in Game With Evansville Here Tonight—Church Teams Play Preliminary Game.

Evansville high school basketball team is the victim for the local toasters in the game to be played at the high school gymnasium tonight at eight o'clock. Whether they will be victorious or not will be up to the high school players themselves. With the overwhelming victory over the University highs last week the Janesville team has new life and tonight they are confident that they can get another victory. Lee, who plays in one of the guard positions, has been absent from practice all this week on account of sickness, but tonight he will be out on the floor to play. Cronin, the other guard, will be there. Cushing or Vinay will play in the center position, and Kober, Richards and Kukuske will make the complete line-up.

Evansville sent word here today that they would have a good bunch of rooters that would accompany their team down here tonight. Their five had had winning streak and from reports they expect to win from the J. H. S. tonight. Davies of the University of Wisconsin has been secured to referee the contest tonight.

The St. Mary's and St. Patrick's church fives will play a game before the high school struggle tonight at six-thirty. This game will be one of the best contests of the league, as both of these teams have not lost a game. The winner of this will be picked the favorites for the cup winners.

MILTON IS DEFEATED IN GAME WITH MILWAUKEE NORMAL

Milton, Wis., Feb. 25.—Milton fell before the attack of the Milwaukee normal basketball team, 22 to 15. Milton could not find the basket in the first half and was snowed under, 15 to 6, at the half time, largely due to four field goals made by Holsinger, the Milwaukee center. Milton came back strong in the second half, but could not do better than hold its own.

The Ramblers had an easy time with the Postwick five last night at the Miller alleys and won from them by about two hundred pins. Ryan rolled for high honors in the second event with 191 pins.

Two Machine Company teams clashed at these alleys last night and the match resulted in a victory for the Rock River five. Few high scores were hit in this game.

West Side Alleys.
At the West Side alleys the Delivery Boys five had another easy time with the Willows five, 140 to 100. In the other match game Gund Peerless five lost to the C. N. W. Freighthouse bunch. This peerless team were out of form in this game and did not hit two thousand pins. Scores and lineups:

M'NEIL'S TEAM WINS IN POOL TOURNAMENT

Has Total of Nine Hundred and Thirteen Against Rotstein's Players' Eight Ninety-four.

On Monday evening, February 28th, at the Grand Hotel, the participants in the recent pool tournament held by the Janesville Lodge of Elks will enjoy a banquet. The losing team, captained by Al Rotstein, paying for the dinners for the winners, captained by William McNeil. The victors obtained a total of 913 to their opponents' 894, forty players finishing their games. The supper will be served at seven-thirty, and special arrangements are being made for a most elaborate menu. The price is a dollar a plate, the losers paying for their own and the winners' meals. Plans will also be discussed for a second tournament on Friday against a far different Purdue team Friday night than they defeated early last month by a score of 33 to 17.

Added to the Boilermakers' lineup on Friday are Mostman and Hart, two of the best offensive players in the big nine. It was Mostman who so nearly defeated Wisconsin a year ago, when he proved too much for Lynn Smith, who was trying to guard him. Since the big center has gotten into the game, the Purdue five has been going at a great speed, and promises to give Wisconsin the hardest fight since the Northwestern game.

The Badgers are in that slump in fighting ability that always follows a big victory that had been in doubt, but if the squad plays the same kind of a game against Purdue as against Illinois, Wisconsin will come off the floor a winner.

OLD BADGERS' COACHING STAFF TO BE BOUNCED

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Madison, Wis., Feb. 25.—A complete cleanup of the University of Wisconsin football coaching staff will be made next Wednesday, when the regents of the university will act upon and probably ratify the appointment of three assistants to Dr. Paul O. Withington. Two of them will be Harvard men: Edward Soucy, an end, and T. M. Doerty, a sub quarterback, and the third man will be Cub Buck, captain of the 1915 Badger eleven. This will mean that a complete Harvard system will be introduced at Wisconsin. Dr. Withington is essentially a lineman, so that he has brought both Soucy and Doherty with him to help with the back-field material.

It is also quite likely that other assistants may be appointed to handle the scrub teams. But Butler may be among these, as he was last year, but, as the whole staff seems to be in for a change, even Butler may have to step out for some other star, probably an alumnus.

This means the end of the Badger coaching career of Keg Driver, old Wisconsin star, who has become almost a fixture at Camp Randall, and Tom Wilson, the popular Princeton man who worked on the linemen last year.

It is rumored in New York that the Giants expect to land Outfielder Rousch of the Newark Reds to take the place of Davy Robertson, who may be unable to play because of a recent accident. Rousch received a trial with the White Sox, but was let out because of a lame arm. As he had fifteen assists with Newark last season, it looks as if his whip was more powerful. He batted .298.

NEW GERMAN CRISIS.

Another crisis with Germany, one manufactured at the White House but no less capable of serious results for that reason, is agitating the people of this country at heart. Prompted by a determination to achieve something which might promote his political fortunes, President Wilson caused Secretary Lansing to propose to the neutral and allied powers of Europe that all merchant ships should abandon the time-honored practice of carrying arms designed for self-defense, and even suggested that this country might desire to admit to her ports or permit to depart therefrom any vessel so armed. And this proposal was made with, apparently, no realization of the difficulties attending the alteration of international law in time of war and no recollection that this government had, as recently as November, 1914, put itself on record in opposition to such a plan. Germany, naturally inspired by the belief that in view of this government's having made this proposal, it would be in hearty accord with it, notified the United States that after this month, while refraining from sinking unarmed passenger vessels without affording passengers and crew an opportunity to escape, it would treat every armed vessel, even if armed only for self-defense, as a belligerent vessel and sink it without warning. This announcement was obviously pleasing to the Wilson, who caused inspired newspaper dispatches to be written saying that the administration cordially approved Germany's position. On February 15th, however, Senator Sterling introduced a resolution protesting against Germany's purpose and calling attention to unequivocal assertions of this administration, dated September 26 and November 7, 1914, that under fixed principles of international law merchant ships were entitled to carry sufficient armament for self-protection and did not, thereby, forfeit anything of the rights or character of merchant ships, and to the further declaration of President Wilson, of May 13, 1915, that "American citizens were within their undisputed rights in taking their (the belligerent's) ships and in traveling wherever their legitimate business calls them on the high seas."

PAINTING THE ROADSIDES.

About this time of year many merchants used to be organizing campaigns for decorating ("the roadsides for many miles around with their advertising. As soon as the spring mud had dried out, they had their teams and men out erecting and painting staring signboards along the country highways.

Very much less of this sort of work will be done the coming spring. In many localities it has stopped altogether. The merchants found out that it did not have advertising value, and they were spending their good money for nothing.

One objection to this outdoor advertising was that it soon became defaced and shabby. Even a neatly painted sign, if exposed to rain and dust, would look ancient in a single season. It would convey an appearance of dinginess that was left-handed advertising for the store that erected it. Boys would use it as a target, and jokers would take paint and alter over words with humorous intent.

The most serious objection to these signs was the public animosity that they created. In many states legislation has been enacted against them. In others various associations have taken the matter up, and have made it a business to wreck roadside signs, confident that they were within their legal rights.

The simple fact is that the people don't want their pretty country roads defaced by advertising. When they go outside of the towns, they like to see country scenes and open air life, and want to forget about business. The signboard is a reminder of commercialism. If erected on a man's place of business, it would not be objected to, if neatly done. Placed on the highway, it offends by being out of place, and it does not help to sell goods.

resigned he should have told his democratic friends he was going to, and Governor Philipp should have listened to the democratic leaders and appointed a good democrat in his place. Talk about Philipp putting the supreme court into politics? Why Hustings would make the appointment one of the spoils of the democratic party for a good, faithful party worker. Every one understood the venom in Owen's address, but the public only laughs at the assassin's declaration of Hustings.

NO SHORTAGE.
There promises to be no shortage of material for the voters of Janesville to make their selections for councilman at the coming March primaries. While but two names will appear on the regular election ballot, the one receiving the highest and the one receiving the next highest vote at the primary, there is a big field of entries for the preliminary tryout. The voters can look over the list and take his pick as the number of aspirants for the office will be numerous enough to give a fair field to all and not much odds offered except on pair contests. The date for the closing of the entries for this spring handicap is set at March 1st, while the preliminary tryout center is March 21st, and the final race April 4th.

The merchant tailors recently gathered in convention said it costs a man $2.00 to dress fashionably for a year. Some men would want to be paid about $2.00 for wearing the fashionable clothes.

The national holidays being a time that should be used for serious reflection, many men spend Washington's birthday in thinking how they can get more business during the month of March.

President Wilson has to leave on a yachting trip when he wants to reflect on an important decision, while the ordinary man gets the same result by resorting to the woodshed.

That proposed regiment of red-headed men would spread terror among the enemy provided they can get someone to agree to take the job of commanding officer.

The steel trust must hope that the government will split their corporation up into thirty-four little companies, so they can put up their prices like gasoline.

The fact that a man knows the dates of the baseball schedule does not prove that he can tell when the political conventions will be held in his district.

Government ownership of railroads is steadily growing more popular, as congress could always be depended on to borrow money and make up the deficit.

Some of the congressmen observed the birthday of Washington, who couldn't tell a lie, by jollying along all the rival candidates for postoffices.

The down-trodden farmers of Kansas who are so pitifully squeezed by the grain speculators, spent $37,000, 000 for automobiles last year.

After paying an extra price to get a seat close to the stage at the theatre, most men proceed to engage a back pew at church.

The season has come when the majority of people have to learn the time when the sun rises by hearsay testimony.

Polish Up the Gun.
I'm studying the scriptures.
About "Peace on earth, good will,"
And "Love thy neighbor as thyself."
And all such precepts, still,
While believing all these doctrines,
And precepts, every one,
I feel it is our duty
To polish up our gun.

The golden rule we ponder,
And scarcely ever cease
To offer up petitions
For everlasting peace;
But somehow we can't help feeling
Our duty isn't done.
In this world of warring nations,
Till we've polished up our gun.

UNCLE ABNER.
A fellow never knows until the time comes whether he is going to be a coward or a coward, and you can't tell much by the looks of a fellow, either. The Hardsell congregation of our village is thinking some of cutting down expenses by dispensing with the sermons and the music.

A fellow gets a worse reputation for drinkin' after he stops that he had before, for everybody says: "You oughta seen him when he was bittin' 'em up—a regular souze." But then,

A Kind Hearted Editor.
Editor George H. Briggs of the Remus (Mich.) Index is a tender hearted old soul. Recently one of his subscribers passed to his final reward and among other things which he left behind was an unpaid subscription account of some fourteen years' standing. At the obsequies, after the friends and relatives had taken a last lingering look, the editor, who is also village undertaker, slipped a linen duster, a thermometer, a palm leaf fan and a recipe for making ice into the coffin before he screwed down the lid.

Conservation.
"And," continued the editor, "I warrant you that there is not a man in the entire audience who has ever lifted his finger or in any way attempted to stop this awful waste of our forests and our lumber supply. If there is I want the man to stand up."

There was a slight commotion in the rear of the room and a nervous little man rose to the occasion—and his feet.

"And now, my friend, will you explain in just what way you have conserved the forests of our nation?"

And with the utmost gravity and sincerity the little man said: "I have used the same toothpick twice."

Is simply immense.

(This week's mystery.)
Promptly at quarter past six, Hemmingway Blossom's alarm clock went off. Promptly at twenty minutes to seven, Hemmingway arose.

"Darn!" he swore with a great round oath.
From one of his shoes, the shoe-string was completely missing.

Suddenly he remembered with a couple of starts that he had been dreaming of the Suez canal, and though not a superstitious man, Hemmingway Blossom shivered.

At that second, the alarm clock went off again.
With a sigh of relief, Hemmingway got back into bed and slept until three in the afternoon, when the rays of the setting sun (it was mid-winter) awoke him.

He was bathed in perspiration, for again he had dreamed of the Suez canal. Trembling, he pulled his other shoe from beneath the bed. That lace, too, was now gone!

His eyes now happened to fall on the ceiling, twelve feet above. He cried out in sudden fear. For there, To Cure a Cold in One Day.

Pay Up and Look Pleasant

Everybody speaks well of the "PAY UP WEEK" movement. It is a novel experience for Janesville. Never before has there been a public invitation to the people to pay up their bills. It was more than a public invitation. It was a general invitation. It was given to you and it was given to me. It applied to the man who owed a thousand dollars and it applied to the man who owed fifty cents.

Primarily the idea was to help the merchant out. A man cannot successfully compete for trade if his capital is tied up in book debts. We believe our merchants are just as enterprising as any in the world, and that they know their business, but the credit system, so universal in Janesville, has been a great handicap. We want to see this handicap removed and once removed we believe they will astonish us.

And the handicap is being removed. The citizens of Janesville are doing their duty nobly, and it is hoped that the next two days the last of the "PAY UP WEEK" will see a general wiping off of old scores.

"PAY UP AND LOOK PLEASANT" is heard on every hand. AND it is a notorious fact that the man who pays up always look pleasant. He feels good. Try it yourself. If you cannot wipe off all the old scores, wipe off some of them. Do it today or tomorrow sure.

PAY UP! PAY UP! PAY UP!

The bowels, or intestines, are the source of many ailments. Those free from some form of bowel trouble are few in number. It may be catarrh, constipation, piles, diarrhoea, dilatation, ulceration, hemorrhage. NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

BY DAISY DEAN

A star whose ascent to nation wide popularity is due to dramatic ability and brilliancy as well as to charm of person and personality is Miss Brady.

Miss Brady is a New York girl who turned to the stage simply because it was impossible to resist the call of her natural talent in that direction. She was educated at the College of St. Elizabeth in Madison, N. J., and soon after graduation made her first appearance in the Metropolitan revivals of Gilbert & Sullivan operettas. She showed such great promise that she was quickly in demand and appeared in the leading roles in the production of "Little Women," "The Family Cupboard," "The Things That Count" and "Sinners," both in New York and throughout the country.

Her first venture in the film drama was in the picture "As Ye Sow." Then followed her hit in "The Boss." Since then she has been starred in a number of big pictures, including "The Lure of Women" and "The Rack."

VIRGINIA PEARSON

"MODERN CLEOPATRA"

Virginia Pearson has become known as a modern Cleopatra. It has suddenly been discovered that Miss Pearson's home in New Jersey contains more of the atmosphere of splendor and pomp than that amid which the Egyptian queen herself lived. And this said that "innumerable peacocks strut between the rows of palms and plume themselves in the mirrored surface of the small lagoon."

DAIRY FARM SCENES

IN WESTERN PLAY

Tom Chatterton is producing a talking photoplay in "The Ranger of Lonesome Gulch," which, as it sounds, is a western play in which Little plays Tom's opposite. In his last picture Chatterton got some dandy scenes of a dairy farm which are particularly beautiful.

The combination of Anna Little and Tom Chatterton is rapidly gaining the one of the most popular in picturedom.

The latter, covering the situation at a glance, saw, as Spike had seen, the real danger: Storm now in possession of the ties was running away with them.

Yelling to his men, Seagrue bade them drop the fight and follow. Spike on his horse was fast overtaking the train.

Running his horse close to the moving train, Spike sprang from the saddle to the engine itself and started back. As he came over the top of the car, Storm on the tender confronted him and the two grappled. Helen had at once taken the throttle, but Spike, fighting Storm back into the coal quickly put him at a disadvantage. He was, in fact, overpowering him when Helen came to the rescue and rapped the convict smartly over the head. She jumped back to the engineer's seat in time to halt the train opposite Rhinelander's camp, and without losing a moment she ran over to headquarters, where she gave the alarm to Wood and asked him to hurry the remainder of the construction gang over to the train before the cars should be stolen again by their active enemies. Wood, who would rather fight than eat, responded like a whirlwind, and heading his men, started them across the fields on the run for the kidnapped train.

Storm had, meantime, dropped a rope around Spike's neck. He tied him to the engine cab just as Helen, with her re-enforcements, reached the tie cars and the men hurriedly began the unloading.

They were not to have an easy time of it. Seagrue, with his rioters, had already climbed the hill and was urging them forward. Not a soul on the engine had a weapon, and as Seagrue's men came on it looked as if the train would be taken then and there by force of numbers. Helen, however, was not without reserves.

Here's a Little Talk On Advertising

By Wm Wrigley, Jr.

You Chew His Gum—Read His Article

Advertising is the Current that turns the Paddle-Wheel of Business. The Newspaper provides a powerful Paddle.

Newspaper advertising hits the spot it's aimed at. It means quick action. It reaches the consumer with his daily news.

It is news. It tells you where to go for what you want. It reminds you of unsupplied needs. It informs you of new conveniences and comforts, and of improvements in old ones.

Newspaper advertising also does effective team work with the local dealer. It stimulates his enthusiasm and that of his salespeople. It strengthens his own advertising.

The newspaper is not only an educational factor. It is a great economical agent, as well.

It helps to lower costs and selling prices.

It gives manufacturers a means of acquiring that distribution which is necessary for the profitable production and sale of large quantities.

In these scientific days quantity has improved quality. The goods with widest distribution and most extensive local advertising are the goods most respected and sought by the public.

For advertising puts it up to the goods to make good in order to survive.

The trade mark is the manufacturer's pride and the consumer's protection.

The newspaper provides a potent and profitable connection between the maker and the user. It keeps trade mark and message before the public eye in an intimate, attention-compelling way.

a story of how an old college athlete demonstrates that he is man enough for a girl who has a wild woods background. In this tale of romance and muscle, most aptly adapted to demonstrate Mr. Bushman's facilities, the charming, loosely-haired Beverly Bayne swoops down upon the (not overly done) pugilistic action of the piece and sprinkles the scenes with inspiring beauty and humor. J. J. Jeffries, the noted heavyweight himself, was enlisted in the development of the story and the observers were treated to considerable lively boxing out among the pine trees.

Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be shown again this evening at the Majestic in Pennington's Choice.

MORRIS MILLER

According to President Joe Lannin, all of the players of the world's championship Red Sox have now signed up except Joe Wood and Tris Speaker. Lannin and Manager Bill Carrigan are not worrying over either of these players. Wood is expected to sign before spring training begins. Speaker is always late in signing and usually attaches his monkey at the close of the training season. Lannin is prepared to give his star outfielder another generous contract this season.

Manager Pat Moran takes thirty-one men to St. Petersburg including himself, which means that quite a number of athletes now calling themselves Phillies never will have a chance of cutting into a world's series melon. Moran has thirteen pitchers on his roster.

Charley Frank of Atlanta was successful in the competition of several Southern league managers to secure Arthur Marcan from Oakland and the former Birmingham second baseman and brief manager of the Little Rock team will be a Cracker this year. Marcan has always been rated a high-class player in the Pacific Coast league.

President Charles Ebbets of the Brooklyn Dodgers thinks it is a good scheme to have home folks among the stockholders. He has started a movement to buy out all of the out-of-town holders of stock in the Brooklyn club so as not to be behind the Chicago National league club.

Tom Downey, whom John Savage tried to snag to manage the Topeka team, has announced his retirement from the game. Downey plans to continue in the contracting business in San Diego, which has been his means of making money in the winters. For seven years Tom was utility player with the Kansas City Blues and last year he played with the Little Rock club of the Southern league.

The three players finally accepted by the Portland club from the St. Louis Browns are second baseman Bobby Vaughn, former Red, and Flobeys Hoff and Sochoron. Vaughn will probably succeed Bill Stumpf while it will be up to the two pitchers to make good against a big lot of tryouts at Portland. Hoff did some good work for the Browns last fall after coming from Rochester. Sochoron has never shown much class.

Death has played a curious part in the disintegration of Connie Mack's championship machine. With in a year an overwhelming majority of the stars of that great team have been scattered to the four winds. In that same year death has claimed Louis Van Zandt, the nationally famous little hunchback mascot of the Mackmen; Sam Erwin, the veteran fan who always made the training trip and managed the Yankees on the faint home; Dr. Isaac Brown, the club physician, and Joe Schroeder, groundkeeper for the Athletics ever since the founding of the American league.

Chief Meyers, who goes from Giants to Brooklyn, will be 34 years old July 29 next. He was born at Riverside, Cal., and is a Mission Indian. He started playing professional baseball with the Harrisburg team of the Tri-State league in 1905. The following year he went to Butte, in the Northwestern league. Butte sold him to the St. Paul club of the American association, and in 1908 he was bought by the Giants for $8,000. Meyers signed a three-year contract with the Giants in the spring of 1914. It calls for $7,500 a year. Up to the time Meyers signed his three-year contract he was a .300 hitter, but immediately afterward began to slump. In 1914 he hit for .286, but last season fell to .232.

The Wrath of God

By REV. J. H. RALSTON
Secretary of Correspondence Department,
Meady Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—"For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness.—Rom. 1:18.

What are the good tidings of great joy as announced by the angels to the shepherds?

To say to men to-day that God loves them? Yes, but only announcing that part of the Gospel the preacher is acting cruelly, he must announce that there is wrath with God. Many years ago the bishop of the central diocese of New York said to a class of young men about to enter the ministry:

"The truth is, half of God's word is law. The Gospel without a promise of retribution is emasculated. It is not only a theological mistake, it is not a Gospel." The text proclaims that there is wrath with God, and there are scores of Scripture passages speaking of the wrath of God and many of them are in the New Testament.

What is the Wrath of God?

When the ancients saw the mountains that are now the witnesses of the wrath of man against man rocking and reeling, they said the gods were mad. But we cannot so think of the wrath of God. That wrath is real indignation against its object, and this indignation carries with it the idea that the object of the wrath will be the subject of God's opposition. The wrath of God is always based on justice and reason that take into account the rights and prerogatives of men as moral agents. Yet, God's own character for holiness and justice will be vindicated whatever may be the impotence of man with such a statement. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap"—no limitation or modification.

The Wrath of God Against All Sinful Men.

We know God hates iniquity and all evil deeds, but it is a more serious matter for us to note that the preponderance of scripture testimony is that the wrath of God is against sinful men and logically so. Sin is an abstract thing, and cannot be in itself the subject of the execution of justice, but the sinner can be. Jesus told Nicodemus that the wrath of God abode on sinning man. Paul told the Ephesian and Colossian Christians that the wrath of God would come on the children of disobedience. He told the Thessalonians that the day is coming when Jesus Christ will be revealed from heaven taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Wrath Provoked, Slow in Development, and Fearful in Visitation.

There are three things concerning the wrath of God that should be carefully noted: First: The wrath of God can be provoked or called out. The Israelites provoked the wrath of God repeatedly and plagues broke out on them. In the second Psalm men were urged to kiss the son lest he be angry and they perish from the way when his wrath was kindled but a little. The wrath of God will never be manifested without the positive act of man calling it out, or provoking it, and one of the strongest evidences of the love of God is that his love has been frequently provoked and was most mercifully restrained. Secondly: The wrath of God is slow in its development. "The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy." One of the minor prophets teaches almost exactly the same thing, saying: "Turn unto the Lord your God, for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger and of great kindness." Thirdly: The wrath of God is fearful in its visitation. The time comes when kindness, merciful indulgence and long-suffering are at an end, and the most terrible judgments fall. This was illustrated in the destruction of the race by the flood, by the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah, by the plagues on Egypt, by the wholesale destruction of many of the enemies of Israel. Not less fearful, indeed rather more so, will be the awful visitation of God's wrath in the future as indicated in 2 Thessalonians 1:7-9.

Thank God there is a refuge, for as Paul teaches by the Holy Spirit, that being now justified by the blood of Jesus Christ, we shall be saved from wrath through him.

If ever in the history of the world the attention of man ought to be called to the wrath of God, it is now when the wrath of man against man—man so glorified by himself as to be almost a god—is manifested with a bitterness and hellish hate as never before.

In the awful experiences in the war-swept regions there is something of the wrath of God.

Men have forgotten God and he is making himself known in wrath. John the Baptists are needed to urge men to flee from the wrath to come.

First Quarter: Lesson IX: Acts VI 1-7: February 27, 1916

THE SEVEN HELPERS

There were Jews of the East and Jews of the West in Jerusalem. The former spoke the Aramaean language; the latter the Greek. Jews of the East were proud of their local nearness to the seat of their religion, while the Western Jews were inclined to discount the accident of geography. This antagonism became the legacy of the Church. Out of this came the first plot on the radiant picture of the Apostolic Church. The Jews of the West protested that their claimants upon the fund did not receive a fair proportion. * * * But the fact there was such a fund at all was the glory of the Church. The best current civilization had shown little sympathy and no organized helplessness for the unfortunate. The suffering was great. It seemed to concrete itself in the estate of the widow. These were appallingly numerous because of war and slavery. They could do little for their own relief because of Oriental custom which secluded women. * * * In the midst of this pitiful social condition, the new and fragrant flower of Christian charity bloomed radiantly. From the humble beginning of "daily ministrations" the religion of Jesus has filled the world with houses of mercy and good Samaritans. The ruins of Rome are searched in vain for the foundations of an orphanage or hospital. Christianity alone created, organized, maintained relief. * * * It is significant of the essentially human nature of the Church that peevishness and classiness should appear. The apostles fault-finding, unchecked, would grow to great strife. Their action in the emergency was frank, prompt, and wise. A conference was called. The twelve confessed themselves unequal to acting as generals and quartermasters simultaneously, and that partially may have been shown. They requested the appointment of officers who should attend exclusively to the temporalities. The result was the institution of the order of deacons. Thus came good out of evil. * * * The non or bi or tri-partisan timent cut no figure in the appointment. From the Greek names the whole college of deacons was chosen from the aggrieved party. Of the seven, only Philip and Stephen achieved historic distinction. Stephen's name is significant—"the crown," first of deacons, first of martyrs. * * * The Hebrew synagogue seems from its very origin, to have been as much of a religious debating club as a place of worship. It was given over to discussion. Stephen, as he found time amid his duties, took a hand in the synagogical "wrangles." The master spirits of five synagogues joined their forces against him in vain. Chagrined by defeat, they proposed to make away with the pestilent debater by foul means. They suborned witnesses to fasten the crime of blasphemy upon him.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

Stephen shines a star in the constellation of deacons. He was undoubtedly an innovator: held views in advance of the apostles themselves, and was the forerunner of St. Paul in declaring the abrogation of the law and of Jerusalem as the pivot on which the Church should turn. This was his Hellenist "pull." He was not so wedded to Judaism as Peter was. The head of his offending was that he affirmed that Moses was not a teacher upon whose instruction no advance was ever to be made. * * * The synagogue is in a measure the model of the Church. As such, it is worthy of close study. The size, organization, functions, and order of worship are significant. These provincial synagogues were named would be the natural rendezvous for the Jews coming up from the several localities. To the schools attached to them the sons of the dispersed Jews would be sent. Thus Saul was probably attached to the Cilician synagogue. Stephen, himself, as a Hellenist, would naturally come in contact with these synagogues, and was probably attached to one of them. It was out of the student corps of the synagogues, probably, that the persecution arose which cost him his life. * * * It is worth notice that five of the deacons are never so much as mentioned after the publication of their names in the Church roster. And that reminds us that half of the apostles themselves never came into contact with the Church, except on the apostolic directory. They seem, however, to have been none the less active because of their obscurity, for their names are as brightly displayed on the foundations of the New Jerusalem as the oft-mentioned apostles. The same is probably true of the five obscure deacons. This is exemplary. Has any a narrow or shaded environment? Let it be filled to the brim with the ministrations of the Church, which ministers and gives, or not ministered to or receiving of worship. * * * Causes of offense in the Church are inevitable. Ecclesiastical authorities are neither infallible nor impeccable. The cure of grievances in the Church is an open hearing of them, and ecclesiastical legislation to suit the case. The true ecclesiastical polity is a providential evolution to meet successive emergencies. * * * As Stephen's enemies could not match Stephen's brains they proceeded to beat them out with rocks. It has happened so many times since. Mud and stones often indicate a shortage in arguments. * * * The fate of the obscure apostles and deacons of the New Testament reminds one of Schiller's immortal colloquy, "What shall I do to be forever known?" "Thy duty!"

"O never, never! Think'st thou unknown whom thou know'st not. By angel trumpets in heaven their fame is blown, Divine their lot!"

PROPOSE A REFERENDUM ON CITY HALL MATTER

February 27, 1916 Habakkuk 11:1-14

EXTERMINATE THE SALOON WHY? HOW?

A little man, little in stature, influence, money, living in an obscure province of Russia witnessed a tragedy. A peasant, inflamed with vodka, killed his wife. From that moment the observer became a total abstainer. He began quietly but convincingly to talk with his neighbors about the evil. His influence went out in concentric circles until his district sent him to the city with instructions to obtain permission to prohibit the drink in that section. The delegate was an astute man. He knew that the empire depended upon vodka for revenue, so he carried with him a guarantee that the district would pay a sum equivalent to that derived from the tax. While in Petrograd he talked unceasingly against vodka. The minister of finance, who could not see where the revenue was to come from, alone opposed him. The opportunity to talk with the czar came one day. So convinced was the emperor that on his next tour of the realm he put the question everywhere about the effects of vodka. On his return the war gave him the opportunity to abolish the drink as a military necessity. It is commonly believed he had determined his ukase at any event.

COUNCIL CONSIDER PAVING OF STREET AT MEETING

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Whitewater, Feb. 25.—The council for some time has been considering the paving of the streets in the business district and at the last meeting County Highway Commissioner Peters and State Highway Engineer Baileys were present and talked to the city on paving. They recommended concrete as the cheapest pavement and at the same time a satisfactory one. About $15,000, raised under the Wisconsin highway law, is available, and this will be used for a paved road eighteen feet wide, or about one-third of the street. The other two-thirds will be paid by the city and the abutting property. They are having a survey of the downtown district and Engineer Tripp is surveying Main, Center and Whitewater streets from the postoffice to Third street. The old brick streets are hard to keep clean, they do not wear and in other ways were very unsatisfactory.

Forty Years Ago

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Feb. 25, 1876.—The second ward school was dismissed at two o'clock yesterday afternoon on account of the illness of the teacher. All is well today. The roads in the country are becoming quite good, and the result is our streets are being crowded by teams loaded with all kinds of produce. The first sermon preached in Janesville was in the summer of 1837, under some oak trees, a little east of the site on which the Stage House was afterwards built.

The most surprising weather of the winter was seen today. The thermometer at mid-day indicated fifty-six degrees above zero, which was a higher temperature than that of last August at the same date.

John Watson is succeeding admirably in driving the piling for the cotton factory addition. Thirty had been driven this morning and many more will be put into position in the next few days. The Corn Exchange folks were busy today.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN. (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

engage in the constructive processes of life constantly within the body, but they also exercise a controlling influence over the destructive forces that threaten the body from without.

Little soldiers of life called corpuscles which we examined a short time ago are never out of the presence of iron. Containing no iron themselves, they nevertheless swim in a fluid which does contain iron. If that iron were not present the little soldiers would die.

Iron combines with oxygen in the presence of water, no matter where it is found. The blade of a pocket knife, the hinge of a barn door, the barrel of a rifle, the spring of a farm wagon, becomes rusty. Rust is simply a combination of iron and oxygen. The chemist calls it "ferrous oxide."

The wonderful affinity of oxygen for iron is an expression of the law under whose operation oxygen finds its way into the body. Without the iron in the red coloring matter of the blood the body could not appropriate the oxygen from the surrounding air, and in a few minutes it would perish.

We need only choke a small creature for two minutes to be guilty of murder. To choke means to shut off oxygen. The carburetor of an automobile engine is equipped with a "choke" to stall the engine. It is only necessary to resort to this choke, which by cutting off the oxygen, makes combustion in the cylinder impossible.

In exactly the same way combustion, supported by oxygen, is necessary to the fires of life. In exactly the same way combustion is prevented in the blood.

If the blood contains only half the iron necessary to bring into the body all the oxygen required the body, through its diminished oxygen supply, will grow pale and sickly. Iron is indispensable. It is a part of the law.

The waste matter which is accumulating in the human tissues during every second of existence would destroy life in a few hours if it were not rendered harmless and carried off. When these waste products are not partially removed the result is auto-intoxication, self-poisoning.

The iron in the blood, uniting in the lungs with the oxygen of the air, carries its life-supporting freight to the tissues, where it oxidizes or burns up the waste substances so dangerous to life.

If the iron is not present in sufficient quantity to keep up with the demand of the body the oxygen that ought to be inside performing its work remains outside and willing, but unable to enter.

When fire, through the influence of oxygen, attacks a piece of wood it produces smoke and ashes. Just as the smoke of the fire has to be carried off through the chimney and the ashes raked through the bars of the grate, so the oxygen-burned waste products of the body have to be eliminated.

It is this oxidizing process going on in the human tissues which we have seen is taken up by the sodium in the blood and discharged through the lungs as carbon dioxide.

The sodium, having work of its own to perform, has to help the oxygen and the oxygen in turn has to be helped by the iron. Thus we obtain a true idea of how these food minerals and the other elements necessary to the support of life operate.

A NOVEL

By GEORGE AGNEW
CHAMBERLAIN

Copyright by The Century Co.

The following day he rooted out two rusty spades from the debris in the old mill, fitted new handles to them and took the old darky, Bonifacio by name, off with him to the depression. They began the long task of digging out the silt of years. Day after day, week after week, they clung to the monotonous work. The darky worked like an automaton. Work in itself to him was nothing beyond the path to food and rest at night. Labor made no demands on courage—it had no end, no goal. But Gerry's labor was dignified by conscious effort. His eyes were not in the ditch but on the vision he had seen of what Fazenda Flores might be. He had fixed his errant soul on a goal. The essence of slavery is older than any bonds wrought by man. The white man and the black in the ditch were its parable. The dignity and the shame of labor were side by side, paradoxically yoked to the same task.

Margarita and her aunt looked on and smiled and joy began to settle on the girl. During Gerry's first restless week she had steered herself each night to the thought that she would wake to find him gone. But now he was taking root. It amused him to dig. Well, let him dig. There was no end to digging.

Gerry occasionally varied the work of digging with making some knick-knack for the house. The twisted limbs of trees became benches to supplant the rickety chairs, clumsily patched and totally inadequate to his weight. In the same way he made the massive frame of a bed and Bonifacio remembered an art and filled in the frame with plaited things. Work inspires emulation. The women got out their store of cloth. They made clothes for Gerry and fitted out the new bed. Pillows and mattress were stuffed with dry pur-marigolds that faintly scented the whole room. With each achievement the somber house seemed to take a step toward gaiety. Ruin and dilapidation put forth green shoots. The gaiety was reflected in the household. They were united in achievement. Quiet smiles were their reward to each other and sometimes a burst of wonder as when Gerry found some old bottles and with the aid of a bit of string cut them into serviceable mugs. Margarita was happy. Her cup was full. All the dreams of her girlhood were fulfilled in Gerry. A silent and strange lover, but a man—such a man as she had dreamed of but never seen. To herself she sang the old songs he should have sung to her and then laughed as he nodded mild approval. One evening he sat on a bench on the veranda, fitting a handle into a dipper made of a cocoanut-shell. Margarita sat on the steps at his feet.

She leaned back further and further until she sank against his knees. He stooped over her. She threw up her arms around his neck, locked her hands and drew him down. He kissed her lips and sighed.

"Ah, do not sigh," she wailed.

"Laugh! Laugh but once!"

Gerry did not grudge the months of toil in the ditch. As he worked he thought and planned. This ditch was the very real foundation for the attainment of his vision. Deep and strong and carefully graded it must be before he cleared the sand barrier to the river's surge. The ditch was slow of growth but there was something about it which held his faith. It was rugged and elemental. It was the ugly source of a coming resurrection.

When it was all but done he took Margarita and showed her his handiwork. He pointed out the little stone-ways, each with its primitive gate, a heavy log hinged on a thole-pin with a prop to hold it up and a stone to weight it when down. On the Fazenda side were innumerable little trenches that stretched down into the valley.

But not until he led her to the cleft in the river gorge and showed her that half an hour's work on the sand barrier would let the river into the great ditch did she understand. And then she caught his arm and burst into violent protest and pleading. "No, no," she cried, "you shall not do it. You shall not let in the river. The river is terrible. You must not play with it. It does not understand. You think it will do as you wish but it will not. Oh, if you must, please, please play with it below the rapids. There it is kinder. It lets one bathe. It lets one wash clothes."

Gerry got over his astonishment and laughed. Then he soothed her. Already the simpler phrases of her tongue came easily from his lips. He told her that she was foolish and a little coward. She must watch and see how tame the river would be.

The next morning Gerry was up early. He was excited. From this day the ditch, the parched slope, the valley would know thirst no more. With the long dry season even the green bottoms had begun to wilt. He called Bonifacio and they started off to their work.

Under direction Bonifacio was digging a great hole just at the back of the sand-bank. Gerry measured its capacity and finally called the old darky out. He jumped down on to the sand-bank himself and dug a small trench to the water. The river surged through it gently. Gerry climbed out. With each pulse of the come-and-go a wave rushed through the little trench, widening it and occasionally carrying away a block of the sand-bank into the hole. Gradually, then in rapid progression, the barrier was leveled. The hole filled with water that rose till it began to trickle down the long length of the ditch. They followed the tiny stream. Soon it came in rushing surges. Hours passed. Bonifacio slept, but Gerry had forgotten time. The ditch filled. The water started to flow back into the river. Along all its length the ditch held.

Gerry started opening the sluice gates, the lowest first. The water gurgled out into the main trench and from there was distributed. At first the thirsty soil swallowed it greedily but gradually the rills stretched farther and farther down into the valley. Under the blazing sun they looked like streams of molten silver and gold.

Margarita came running up to them from the house. Gerry put his arm around her and made her face the valley. Then he looked at the girl and smiled. She smiled back at him but trouble was still in her eyes.

Gerry left her to start on the work of fitting the ponderous sluice-gate of hewn logs that he had prepared for the mouth of the great ditch. It was a triumph of ingenuity. He never could have evolved it without the aid of a giant ironwood worm-screw taken from the wreck of a cotton press. The screw was so heavy that he and Bonifacio could hardly carry it.

At the end of three days the great gate was installed. He and Bonifacio toiled like sailors at a capstan. They drove the heavy barrier down into the sand with a last turn of the screw and shut out the river. Margarita came and saw and was pleased.

CHAPTER XXV

Under the broad dome of a mango tree on the banks of an unnamed African river Alan Wayne had pitched his camp. The Selwyn tent and the projecting veranda fly were faded and stained. The bobbinet mosquito curtains were creamed with age and service. Two camp chairs and a collapsible table battered but strong, were placed before the tent. Over one of the chairs hung a towel. On the ground squatted a take-down bath tub, half filled with water. In the deep shadow of the tree the pale green rot-proof canvas of the tent, the fly, the chairs and bathtub, gleamed almost white.

On the farther side of the great trunk of the tree was the master's kitchen, three stones and a half-circle of forked sticks driven into the ground. On the sticks hung a few pots and pans, a saddle of buck, bits of fat and a disreputable looking coffee-bag. Between the stones was a bed of coals. Before them crouched a red-fezzed Zanzibari.

From under a second tree, fifty yards away, came the dull, rhythmic pounding of wooden pestles in wooden mortars. The eye could just distinguish the glistening naked torsos of three blacks in motion. They were singing a barbarous chantey. At the pauses their arms went up and the pestles came down together with a thud. The blacks were pounding the kafir corn for the men's evening meal.

Down the river and almost out of sight a black, spidery construction reached out over the water—Alan's latest bridge. Men swarmed on it.

Six o'clock and there came the trill of a whistle. Suddenly the bridge was cleared. A babble of voices arose. There was a crackling of twigs, a shuffling of feet, here and there a high, excited cry, and then the men poured into camp. A din of talk, held in check for hours, arose. Glistening black bodies danced to jerky, fantastic steps. Songs, shouts and impatient cries to the cooks swelled the medley of sound. Through the camp stole the acrid odor of toiling Africa.

Behind the men marched the foreman, McDougal; behind him came Alan. At sight of him the Zanzibari sprang into action. He poured a tin of hot water into the bath tub and laid out an old flannel suit. Beside the suit he placed clean underwear, fresh socks and, on the ground, a pair of slippers.

Alan stripped, bathed and dressed. The Zanzibari handed him a cup of hot tea. By the time the tea was drunk the table was freshly laid and Alan sat down to a steaming bowl of broth, and dinner.

After dinner McDougal joined him for a smoke. For a full half hour they sat wordless. Darkness fell and brought out the lights of their fitfully glowing pipes. From the men's camp came a subdued chatter. The men were feeding. As they finished they lit fires—a fire for every little group. The smell of the wood fires triumphed over every other odor.

McDougal had met Alan first in a bare room at an African seaport. The room was furnished with a chair and a table. At the table sat Alan, busy with final estimates and plans for supplies for his little army. The interview was short. McDougal had asked for a job and Alan had answered, "Get out." McDougal had repeated his request and the rest of the story he told the next morning before the resident magistrate in the chair and Alan in the dock.

"Awful, your honor, it was this way: I went into Mr. Wayne's office and asked him for work and he said, 'Get out.' I asked him again and he said, 'I'll give you two to get out—One—Two,' and with that he comes on to the table and flying through the air, I had just considered that it was best I should let him hit me first since that I might break him with justice when he struck me face with both fists, and his knee in the pit of my stomach. And that's all, your honor, savin' the kafir that I woke up to find watering me and a rose bush, turn by turn about."

"I suppose," said the magistrate, covering his twitching mouth with his hand, "that was the kafir I signed a hospital pass for last night?"

"It may well be," replied McDougal drearily. "It may well be."

"Well, McDougal, I think this is a matter that can be settled out of court."

McDougal held up a vast hand in interruption. "Begging your pardon, your honor, there'll be nae settling of this matter out of court between Mr. Wayne and myself. Aince is enough."

Justice and the prisoner in the dock surrendered to laughter. McDougal stood grave and unperturbed. (To be continued.)

rough-looking hobo invaded the yard one afternoon and asked where was father kept his money.

"It's in his vest in the kitchen," said Percy.

A few minutes later the hobo came through the kitchen doorway in a hurry, much battered and torn.

"Smart kid!" he muttered. "Never said a word about the old man being inside the vest."

"What in heck is the matter with your wife, Jack?" inquired a certain foremost citizen of the Arkansas neighborhood of Rumus Ridge, addressing another prominent citizen of the same locality, who was hanging over the fence, wrapped in profound meditation.

"Pshaw!" melanchantly replied Jack Gap. "Just some prank or nuther, I reckon. She's allus been sorter odd, you know. Looks like rain, don't it?"

"Ed, deadurn it, man, she is tearin' her hair out by the roots and yellin' at the top of her voice!"

"Aw, well, they're her hair and voice, ain't they?"

Tells Her Experience To Benefit Others

Mrs. Dunlap Sends a Letter Addressed to the Readers of the Paper.

A sense of duty to others who might suffer as she had impelled Mrs. R. C. Dunlap, of Dekalb, Mo., to send the following signed statement to the St. Joseph, Mo., News-Press:

"The readers of the News-Press, especially those suffering from gallstones, stomach trouble and appendicitis, will find in Fruitula and Traxo a permanent cure. After suffering for three years the most excruciating pain from gallstones I found this wonderful remedy and am now in perfect health and have been for almost four years. Never have any symptoms of the old trouble. I had been told by three doctors that nothing but an operation would save me. I know several who have undergone an operation but still have gallstones. This medicine is an oil which softens the stones and cures the liver. It can be bought at any drug store."

Fruitula is an intestinal lubricant that softens the congested masses, disintegrates the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, and expels the accumulation to the patient's great relief. Traxo is a tonic-alternative that acts on the liver and kidneys, stimulates the flow of gastric juices to aid digestion, and removes bile from the general circulation.

Fruitula and Traxo are prepared in the Pinus Laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists. In Janesville they can be obtained at J. P. Baker, 123 West Milwaukee street.

JOE THE BOOK FARMER MAKING GOOD ON THE LAND

By GARRARD HARRIS

COPYRIGHT, 1913,
BY HARTMAN & BROTHERS.

"That's what I thought. I never heard of anybody else planting potatoes this way, but it looks like reason and common sense to me. Don't you think so? There's no reason to put hills here at first, because the land is well drained and deep plowed. Water won't stand on it."

"Seems sensible to me," agreed Link. "Mister Joe, what made you think of that way to plant potatoes?"

"Wanted to do the work at less cost and make a profit."

"Mister Joe, just persistently what is it?"

"I ain't never got that right in my mind yet. I know 'bout Bible prophecies, but what's dis kin' yo' is allers talkin' 'bout."

"The less it costs you to make a crop of corn or potatoes the more you make when you sell, because you don't have to deduct from the price you got the increased cost of making the crop. It's the difference between what it costs you to make a crop and what your stuff brings."

"But dis yer later crop ain't costin' yo' nothin' 'cept do seed, $2 worth of fertilizer an' de time wuckin' 'em."

"That's it. Time can be turned into money. The less time it takes to make these potatoes the more time I will have to put on something else to make money on. See?"

"I does," said Link proudly. "I wants ter learn dese things, kase I's gwine ter be sho as yo' bawn."

That night Joe got down the nicely bound blank book he had purchased for a quarter in town and prepared to open his account of operations for the year. The rules of the Corn Club contest required that every move be made, with dates and items of expense be noted as made.

Before going to work on his book he told about how Link had finally got the idea that time was money. Mr. Weston laughed.

"That reminds me of another story they tell on Hen Tucker. He was in town one day, and a feller was on the street sellin' a new kind of incubator. Hen stood right in front of the crowd, mouth open, takin' it all in. The man explained that the incubator would do the work and the settin' hens could be put back to work layin'."

"Ain't it a wonder, friend? Don't you think it's fine? Aint it a time saver?" preached the agent. Tucker thought it was up to him to say something, so he kind of gasped, his mouth workin' like that of a perch out o' water.

"Aw, shucks," sezze, tryin' to show the crowd how smart he was, "what's the use of that contraption? What's time to a settin' hen, anyhow?"

I thought that crowd would bust their sides laughin'. Everybody used to call 'im Henry before that, but they got to callin' him 'Settin' Hen' an' then it got down to 'Hen,' an' that's been his name ever since."

CHAPTER XV.

Hear the Corn Grow.

REASONABLE showers fell on the corn crop. Joe kept the soil stirred lightly with a hand rake so as to conserve the moisture and applied 200 pounds of nitrate of soda when the stalks were two-thirds grown.

That gave the crop a strong impetus, and tassels began to show above the dark green leaves, some of which were almost five inches across. A good soaking rain fell, followed by a cloudy day and a day's drizzle. That night it showered intermittently, and Joe and his father went down about dusk between showers. His father had told him he heard something rustling about in the corn. The idea of a cow or a horse in there working havoc sent a cold chill down Joe's back.

The two stopped at the fence and listened in the dead stillness.

There was a cautious rustling, faint but plain. It was a sort of whispered rustle that a person could sense more than he could hear.

"Hear that? That's it! Some of them poshy critters in there!" excitedly urged Mr. Weston.

The slightest rustle was heard again. In fact, it never seemed to stop. Occasionally there was a louder noise. Joe laughed.

"That's the first time I ever heard corn grow!" he said.

"Hear it grow? That's the first I ever heard of that sort of foolishness," snorted his father.

"That's what I said—heard it grow. That noise is just the unfolding of the leaves. The rain is furnishing plenty of moisture and the sap is rushing up, and the leaves are simply opening fast—tassels coming out, and all that."

"I'll believe nuthin' near anything my son says about corn, but blame my cats if I go that far as to say I heard corn grow!" said Mr. Weston, with much distrust in his tone.

"All right, then. What makes that rustling in there?" asked Joe.

"Pesky cat—or—or jay birds roostin' in it, or—or wind." He ran out of conjectures.

"You know it ain't possible for a cat to be in there because we been all round the fence; it's right, and the gate is locked. Now, cut out the cat!" suggested Joe.

"Well, how about jay birds or wind, or varmints?" asked Mr. Weston hopefully. He was determined that if should not be unfolding corn leaves that he heard.

"Did you ever hear of jay birds roosting in corn—honest, now?" insisted Joe.

"Well, don't know's I ever did."

"All right; jay birds and calves are out of the question. Do you feel any breeze to rustle the corn?"

"N-no—b'lieve not," said Mr. Weston. He was being hemmed in and knew it. There never was a calmer night—not a breath of air stirring.

"Now the wind is out of the question too. Listen! Hear that?" They listened again.

"Sounds like the whisperin' in that big seashell when you hold it to your ear," said Mr. Weston.

"Ain't a thing in the world except the corn growing—leaves unfolding and rubbing against one another as they open—that makes that noise. So you can say that you've heard corn grow, even if you never saw it grow," suggested his son.

"Well, live an' learn!" his father responded.

"Hope to goodness we won't have a rain for about two or three weeks," said Joe. "That corn is fine, and if we have a nice, quiet, dry spell and no big wind the pollen will fall plentiful from the tassels to the silk, and the ears will be seeded plumb to the end, good fertile grains. Wet weather just at tasseling time is bad for corn. It is always better if the weather is dry and still."

"I've heard old farmers say that, but they didn't know the reason," said Mr. Weston.

"If there's much wet weather or wind about tasseling time the pollen from the tassels don't fall on the silk evenly. That is necessary to make a perfect grain. There's a strand of silk for each grain. Unless that strand gets pollen on it, no grain. Rain and wind wash the pollen away before it gets on all the silk."

"That makes nubby corn?" inquired his father. Joe nodded.

If the weather had been ordered especially for the corn it could not have been any finer. It was exactly three weeks until a gentle, slow rain fell one night.

"My crop's made; it's made!" rejoiced Joe when he arose the next morning. "Grain's all formed; now plenty of moisture to fill 'em out; crop's made, I tell you, and it's going to be a wale of a crop, believe me!"

"Looks like the season come just right," observed his mother.

"Couldn't be better," admitted Joe.

His effort at seed selection was bearing fruit. He had saved the seed from the stalks with the most ears on them, and in the crop coming on there was at least a third of the crop with three perfectly developed ears on each stalk, probably fifty stalks with four well developed ears and a half dozen which showed four good ears and a rudimentary ear which could in time be developed into a perfect ear.

Joe went through and marked all the five eared stalks with a red calico string, the four eared ones with a blue strip and the three eared ones with a white piece of cloth.

"I'm goin' to gather it all separately," he explained to his father. "These few stalks showing the five ear tendency I am going to plant off by themselves next year and develop them up; same way with the four ears. May plant the two together. I'm not certain now, but I want to breed that corn up to five good ears to the stalk."

"What about this here three ear corn?" inquired Mr. Weston.

"Just I want to get enough of it for you to plant here on the place; then the rest of it I will sell for seed."

"What about the balance, Joe?"

"Feed the hogs with it."

"Why, Joe," protested Tom Ralston.

"You could sell any of this corn for seed corn at a fancy price just because it came off this acre. You're foolish not to."

"Well, maybe I'll sort out the best ears from the two ear corn and sell it at a slight advance for the trouble in sorting it out, but I won't take any fancy price for it, because it ain't fancy corn. And I ain't particular anxious to sell it. It's worth as much to us for feed as the money is."

"That patch out there ought to make a good crop of corn."

"I think you ought to be willing to sell it for seed corn," said his father. "It's fine, strong corn, better than any of this around here. It's bound to give good results, an' you'll help the farmers that want to get a good corn to plant."

"Oh, well, looking at it that way, I reckon it's sort of my duty to let it go. But just wait until I get me a five ear corn fixed. I'll get five and six dollars a bushel for it right along."

"How you going to carry on corn breeding if you are off at school?" inquired Tom Ralston.

"Dettor get the trip to the school first. But if I do go up there pa can do all that's needful next year. Plant on part of this acre the four ear and five ear corn. I'll pick the two most perfect ears to get seed from. Then, when the ears are matured, do as I have done—pick out the best and strongest stalks with the most ears on 'em and mark 'em. Then the next year I'll carry it on myself."

"What about the rest of that four ear corn?" inquired Mr. Weston.

"Sell it at $4 a bushel for seed after you have got all you want. Same way with the three ear—sell that at $3 a bushel."

"That patch out there ought to make a good crop of corn next year," reflected Mr. Weston.

"For goodness' sake, don't plant a stalk of corn in her except that stuff we are trying to breed up. Don't want any other corn any closer than that field below the hill. The pollen of that low grade corn will get mixed with this fine corn and set us back no telling how far."

"Oh, all right, then. But what shall we plant here?"

"Break it early and sow cowpeas broadcast, thick as you can. Mix some corn in with 'em, say, half and half. When the corn gets almost to tasseling stage sow vines and all off for hay. Break it and turn everything under and drill corn in thick. Let it get high as your head, and cut that too. We'll need lots of provender. Guess it would be a good idea to plant cowpeas along with the second crop too."

"I was thinkin' of lettin' the oats mature next spring. We'll be needin' 'em," said his father.

"Well, that's all right. Out stubble turned under is a help, and you can get a good crop of pea vine hay and young corn fodder off here after the oats. I expect that would be the best plan."

"I'll do that, then."

"Don't try truck next spring?" asked Tom.

"No, we'll be short handed, and it will be all Link an' me can do to keep the stock growin' fast an' get regular crops and such. I'll wait until Joe gets back."

"Say, I've been doing some studying 'bout the knob in the Voges mountains down as 'Old Armand,' or Hartmannswillerkopf. One might imagine that the side holding this crest held the key to Paris or to Berlin is not so. It's simply the feud going on, each side determined to have the honor of holding the top of the mountain. It is like the struggle about a flag; a matter of pride in taking and holding."

The quarrel began exactly a year ago. A small detachment of French Chasseurs established an advance post on the summit of Hartmannswillerkopf. They were surprised by a larger force, surrounded and beaten. This was on Jan. 15, 1915.

Fortifying the position strongly as an observation point, the Germans took the crest until March 23, when the French stormed the hill, took the trenches at the top, captured 10 officers, 34 non-coms and 313 men, all unwounded.

Early in April the Germans recaptured part of the lost trenches, but the French, on April 6, charged again, took all they had lost, together with the big rock on the far side of the summit.

Humiliated, the Germans prepared a counter-attack which they launched April 28, taking everything back to and including the summit where they feverishly set to work organizing the position so it would be stronger than ever. All night they worked, but with dawn came the Blue Devils, as the Alpine Chasseurs are called, swarming up the precipitous slopes of "Old Armand" and despite machine guns, rifle fire and bayonets they reached the top and put the Germans to rout once more. Immediately the Germans tried to rally but failed, though they established trenches within seven yards of those of the French at the top.

Throughout the summer the little war in the middle of the big war kept going, first the Germans gaining a section of trench at this point or that, then the French driving them out and taking a corresponding slice of the German trenches a bit lower down the slope.

On Sept. 9 the German after a period of comparative calm, slammed home a surprise attack and retook the summit. The French, undismayed, came back at the Germans the same night and in the dark fought like the blue demons people call them. They retook their trenches and many German dead were left behind.

The same thing happened all over again Oct. 15, when the Kaiser's men sent wave after wave against the bitterly contested mountain top, finally taking the whole works driving the French back down the hill in the direction of France. But on October 16 the French came tearing up the hill again and drove the Germans out.

The Germans came back in December several times, gaining a foothold, but just before Christmas the French drove them back with heavy losses, including nearly 1400 prisoners. Two days later the Germans retook part of the lost ground and some French prisoners. Then the French surged forward, making new gains and taking about 300 more prisoners.

So the struggle for the top of the mountain goes on. To hold it is an honor. To win this honor many soldiers have died. To the layman their death may seem vain, foolish, useless.

REFORM LABOR LAWS ARE PASSED IN JAP FACTORIES

Tokio, Feb. 25.—Social reformers are expressing satisfaction over the putting into operation of a new law by which something like a million Japanese workers will be benefited.

The new law applies some 11,000 factories employing ordinarily fewer than fifteen operatives or those engaged in dangerous or injurious work.

The main features of the bill are the prohibition of child labor in any heavy work; the prohibition of employment of male workers under 15 years and females of any age for more than twelve hours in a single day, and the prohibition of the employment of male operatives under 15 and all females between the hours of 10 p. m. and 4 a. m. except in exceptional cases when speedy execution of a contract on hand is required.

Furthermore, factory owners are required to give at least two holidays a month to male operatives under 15 and to all females, with the understanding that this number is to be doubled in case the work is carried on day and night and the operatives engaged are divided into groups and work in turn. It is forbidden to employ boys under 15 women for such work as cleaning, oiling or repairing of machines in motion or for any other dangerous work such as the handling of explosives or poisonous or any other injurious material and in a general way conditions are dangerous or hygienically harmful.

Another provision is that in case of injury or death of the operative through no gross fault of his own the factory shall give relief to the operative or to his family. The regulations also provide a fine for violation of the law.

The bill was originally promulgated in the form of an imperial ordinance in 1911 but its enforcement has been postponed until now on the ground of a lack of appropriation required for the establishment of the factory department of the government and the payment of officials necessary to supervise the operation of the law.

When the bill was adopted it was severely criticised on the ground that it did not sufficiently meet the evils of the child factory system. Some of the provisions have been revised since that time and the bill is more satisfactory in its present form to the Japanese people who are insisting upon social reform.

CHINESE STUDENTS ARE AGAINST MONARCHY AGAIN

Tokio, Feb. 25.—About 300 of the more conservative Chinese students in Tokio have signed a memorial concerning the proposal to revive the monarchy in China and pledging their efforts in opposition to Yuan Shikai's plans to make himself Emperor.

Yuan's attitude in carrying out his ambition in the name of the nation's wish and the wish of the friendly powers," said the memorial, "is certain to cause a great menace to the world and to insult the friendly powers. We resolve to oppose his idea of becoming a monarch and advise him to change his mind and establish a true democratic constitutional government and to strive for the maintenance of the world's peace with the assistance of the friendly powers."

SOLDIERS IN FEUD OVER MOUNTAIN TOP

French and Germans in Bitter Fight Over Mountain Top.—Struggle Still Going On.

By William Philip Simms.

With the French Army in Alsace, Feb. 25.—A feud in the middle of a big war, that is what this position of Hartmannswillerkopf is; a feud just like the one that is going on in Breathit county, Kentucky. For French officers that this position on the Western battlefield has no more and less importance than scores of other points elsewhere between the Sea and Switzerland.

Every few days the French and German communiques mention scraps of the knob in the Voges mountains down as "Old Armand," or Hartmannswillerkopf. One might imagine that the side holding this crest held the key to Paris or to Berlin is not so. It's simply the feud going on, each side determined to have the honor of holding the top of the mountain. It is like the struggle about a flag; a matter of pride in taking and holding.

The quarrel began exactly a year ago. A small detachment of French Chasseurs established an advance post on the summit of Hartmannswillerkopf. They were surprised by a larger force, surrounded and beaten. This was on Jan. 15, 1915.

Fortifying the position strongly as an observation point, the Germans took the crest until March 23, when the French stormed the hill, took the trenches at the top, captured 10 officers, 34 non-coms and 313 men, all unwounded.

Early in April the Germans recaptured part of the lost trenches, but the French, on April 6, charged again, took all they had lost, together with the big rock on the far side of the summit.

a counter-attack which they launched April 28, taking everything back to and including the summit where they feverishly set to work organizing the position so it would be stronger than ever. All night they worked, but with dawn came the Blue Devils, as the Alpine Chasseurs are called, swarming up the precipitous slopes of "Old Armand" and despite machine guns, rifle fire and bayonets they reached the top and put the Germans to rout once more. Immediately the Germans tried to rally but failed, though they established trenches within seven yards of those of the French at the top.

Throughout the summer the little war in the middle of the big war kept going, first the Germans gaining a section of trench at this point or that, then the French driving them out and taking a corresponding slice of the German trenches a bit lower down the slope.

On Sept. 9 the German after a period of comparative calm, slammed home a surprise attack and retook the summit. The French, undismayed, came back at the Germans the same night and in the dark fought like the blue demons people call them. They retook their trenches and many German dead were left behind.

The same thing happened all over again Oct. 15, when the Kaiser's men sent wave after wave against the bitterly contested mountain top, finally taking the whole works driving the French back down the hill in the direction of France. So the struggle for the top of the mountain goes on. To hold it is an honor. To win this honor many soldiers have died. To the layman their death may seem vain, foolish, useless.

War, therefore, is a very positive honor to the monks of Mt. Athos. So after due deliberation, they decided to send two of their presidents (of whom there are four named in rotation from each of the convents each year) to Athens, to lay their fears before the representative of the secular head of the Greek church. In pursuance of this decision, armed with a loaf of black bread, a little paper of salt and an ikon or great beauty, new to the world outside of Mt. Athos, the two black-robed elders of the ancient religious republic left the protected peace of their cliffs and walls, sought and ventured the troubled waters of the Aegean to put their difficulties before Prince Demidoff, Imperial Russian Minister to Greece. The secular head and most powerful defender of the Greek church in the world outside of Mt. Athos is the Emperor of All the Russians. To him in person they could not go. The way was cut off. Neither through Bulgaria in arms nor by way of the besieged Bosphorus could these legates of Mt. Athos come to their next trend and protector. So they went as best they could to his representative, dressed in their ample, flowing robes, turned upside down, and their unkempt hair and patriarchal beards. And the Russian Minister received them, gave them food and drink in his expensively furnished palace in return for their great and salt, and treating them with great respect, assured them their case would be put before the Emperor himself, and that a contingent of Russian marines would be sent to guard the peninsula if they had to come all the way from Athens to get there. He told them not to fear, for the Bulgarians, too, are of the Greek church and themselves have a convent all of their own on Mt. Athos; and it was scarcely conceivable that even the least scrupulous of Bulgarian "komitadjis" bandits should lay hostile hands upon the holy things of the Church.

MONKS OF MT. ATHOS IN AN APPEAL FOR PROTECTION

Karyes, Chalcidic Peninsula, Macedonia, Feb. 25.—The monks of Mt. Athos have appealed to the Holy Mother church of Russia for protection. Disturbed in their quiet, worldly lives by the approach of the world war to a Balkan battlefront several months ago, the Holy Synod of the Community, which constitutes the thoroughly democratic government of the twenty convents, long deliberated the peril threatening them. They are not ignorant of war. At one time their convent walls were mounted with cannon, and in the early part of the last century they took with sad results for themselves, a part in the Greek war for independence from Ottoman rule.

War, therefore, is a very positive honor to the monks of Mt. Athos. So after due deliberation, they decided to send two of their presidents (of whom there are four named in rotation from each of the convents each year) to Athens, to lay their fears before the representative of the secular head of the Greek church. SPRING MODELS FOR WOMEN ARE CHARMING IN BOTH SUITS AND DRESSES

Our display of Spring Suits at a moderate price is a pleasant surprise to hundreds of women who come here to view them.

Regardless of the fact that merchandise is daily advancing in the Eastern market it seems that our prices not only remain the same, but in many instances they are lower than ever before. While our profits might be less we feel that by holding down the prices we will be able to do a larger volume of business and in the end it will be not only to your advantage but to ours as well. This policy we intend to carry out all through the store this season. By carefully making a comparison of prices you will readily see that whatever this store has and advertises is for less.
